CES

1991 – 2015
Foundation of CES
CES was founded by Hans-Werner Sinn on 18 January 1991. The funds came from the ministry of culture to counter an offer that Sinn had received from the University of Berne, Switzerland.

CES was gradually expanded over the years by further counter offers to offers Sinn received from the Max-Planck-Society and the HWWA.

A Start Has Been Made

Ein Anfang getan

The Center for Economic Studies (CES) has been formally established in Munich, the German Ministry of Economic Affairs and Development, and a joint initiative of Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität and ifo Institute for Economic Research.

Happy Anniversaries

On 15 January 1993, the legal foundation of the Center for Economic Studies (CES) was formally confirmed by the Bavarian Ministry of Economic Affairs. This confirmation launched the building of a research infrastructure that has since been established in Munich, particularly in the field of macroeconomics and institutional economics. In addition, the center has been able to attract more than 225 visitors and has significantly increased the integration of Munich into the international scientific community.

To mark the occasion of its 10th anniversary, CES, in cooperation with CESifo, will hold a conference on Public Finance and Public Policy on Current Research on 12-13 January, 2001. The conference will bring together a group of researchers who have visited CES during the last ten years and who together present an array of scholarly views on various economic policy problems that will continue to shape society and shape the policies in the years to come. Special attention will be given to topics such as "Public Choice Theory", "Public Finance and Public Policy Problems for an Integrating Europe".

The celebration of CES's anniversary also includes an exhibition, which features the work of many researchers who have visited CES over the years. The exhibition will be held in cooperation with the Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität and the ifo Institute for Economic Research.

Managerial

Steffen Reichelstein, currently a research professor at the Hasso Plattner Institute of Hasso Plattner Institute at the University of Stanford and previously a professor of economics at the University of Chicago, will be the new director of CES.

Reichelstein's research interests range from macroeconomics, international finance, and asset pricing to empirical methods and quantitative techniques.

The focus of his research is on the impact of individual and institutional investors on market prices and the implications of these findings for financial decision making.

The center is also committed to promoting research and education in the field of economics. It is particularly engaged in the development of new research methodologies and the dissemination of its findings.
